CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY

Concordia University was created in 1974 out of the merger between Loyola of Montreal and Sir George Williams University. Now the university enjoys two distinctive campuses with the Loyola Campus in a pleasant tree-lined area in west-end Montreal and the Sir George Williams Campus located in the urban environment of downtown Montreal.

Concordia offers eight degrees in Arts, Business Administration, Commerce, Computer Science Education Engineering, Fine Arts, and Science in 57 disciplines. It also has a graduate school.

It is characterized by personalized, student centered education and easy rapport among students, faculty and administration. Concordia has obtained a balance between a friendly informed atmosphere that respects a student's individuality, and a well equipped educational institution with an academic program that is recognized throughout Canada, the United States and Europe.
